OWINGSVILLE, KENTUCKY.

THE LITTLE KING.

He came to his kingdom at dead of night,
(Oh, never a cent to pay had he);
The robes were fine and with lace bedight
Of this son of royalty.

He sat down and took his ease,
(Oh, never a cent to pay had he);
No word he said, nor cared to please,
So very high was he.

On each fine day he rode in state,
(Oh, never a cent to pay had he);
With vassals true to wait and wait
His pleasure need we see.

Of everything he had the best,
(Oh, never a cent to pay had he);
With not a care to trouble his rest,
Or a fear of ought to be.

And time goes on; he holds the throne;
(Yet never a cent to pay has he);
And we all keep step his swift commands.
With fond humility.

CHAPTER XV.—CONTINUED.

The conversation which Sonntag and myself had noted this morning in our endeavor to solve the mystery of the voices in my bedroom and up in the attic seemed of the greatest significance. Some property was to be removed this very night, and if the reference was to anything hidden in the cellar the removal might take place while I was absent on my present errand.

The thought caused me to urge forward the horse to his greatest speed, and very soon I drew near the station. Stopping a short distance away, I tied the horse to the fence, and then cautiously approached, being careful to keep in the shadows as much as possible.

The station was standing out bold and distinct in the bright moonlight. There was not a sign of a human being anywhere. The signal light was a pale cast, a sickly glow in contrast to the white moonlight.

With pistol ready for immediate use in my hand, I ran swiftly forward and leaped upon the platform. The door of the station-house was locked, as were also the windows. By the gleam of the station light I could see the telegraph instrument inside.

The bank in which I had been employed was equipped with a private telegraph wire. In the gradual climb to the teller's office I had at one time held the position of stenographer and telegrapher. How thankful I was now for the long hard study and practice gone through to fit myself for that position! I had not forgotten how to send or receive a message.

With the butt end of the pistol a pane of glass was smashed, and, reaching in through the opening, I undid the lock, and in another moment was inside.

My fingers trembled with excitement, as I threw the switch which connected the instrument with the circuit, and then handled the key.

I did not know the call for Philadelphia, so clicked the abbreviation "Phil" a few times, and was delighted in receiving a quick response.

"Operator—Keep this dead secret, and have delivered quickly," I wired. The answer came back: "O. K. Go ahead."

BENJ. F. PERRY, 1459 Ridgefield Ave., Phila., Pa.: Come quick to Sidington on J. & M. division Mid-Trunk Ry. Get special train; bring detectives. Recovery of stolen funds and arrest of thieves in question. Do not fail. Am all alone. Nelson Conway."

I followed this up by another request to have it delivered immediately to which the short but gratifying response came: "You bet. Good luck!"

The operator evidently comprehended the full meaning of my dispatch. Indeed, anyone who had resided in Philadelphia at the time of the robbery, reading that message, would know its meaning.

The short term expressing good will, received in answer to my request to rush, coming from one I had probably never seen, encouraged me greatly.

Then, too, knowing Mr. Perry's energetic nature, I was confident that gentleman would be up and doing immediately upon the receipt of my dispatch. A man of his standing would have no difficulty in procuring a special train, and, allowing the time necessary to obtain the officers of the law, in two or three hours I could expect Mr. Perry's arrival.

I could not repress a smile as I pictured to myself the president of the Safety Security company riding, in his carriage, to the station, where he was attached, and urging the engineer to greater speed. It was certain in my mind that that special would travel as fast as steam could drive the wheels.

A feeling of satisfaction came over me at having taken a decisive step, and my spirits rose in accordance. The numbers and daed condition of my facilities had passed away, and I felt that to rely on one's own exertions was the better way, after all.

Leaving the station, I went back to my horse, mounted, and started up the long hill. Arrived at the top, I again dismounted in front of Sarah's house, and, going in the front door, rapped long and loud. In answer to my summons a voice called from an upstairs window:

"Sarah, is that you?" I asked, stepping from the shadow of the porch into the moonlight.

"Ach Gott, Nei, wat ist es?" the good woman exclaimed, fear and excitement beholding me at this late hour causing her voice to tremble.

"No, indeed. He sleep like a log."

"Well, wake him up, and tell him to hitch a team in the double wagon. There will be a special train come to the station within a few hours. Have the team waiting for it. Three or four men will get off the train; take them up and drive them over to the old place just as fast as the horses can go. Will you do this for me, Sarah?"

"Vati! I come down," was her breathless reply.

I was anxious to be off homeward, but as I had time to become impatient I delay the front door.

Sarah stepped out.

"Understand, I told

stair.

"Now I must hasten back. Heaven only knows what might happen during my absence," I said, making a start for the gate.

"Ach Gott, Nei, vat is de matter, anyways? Tell me! Is dere any harm to you?" Sarah cried after me, in such deep concern that, remembering she knew nothing at all of the occurrences at my house, I came back.

"I haven't time to stop and tell you everything," I said, hurriedly. "But I have found a small portion of the securities the bank lost by the robbery. It was a bond, and I picked it up from the floor of the cook-house cellar. Some one dropped it, and when the loss is discovered will be back after it. So want to be there and see who it is."

TERRIFIC BATTLE

Heavy Engagement Between the Two Armies.

FIGHTING ALL DAY.

Outer Works Were Carried By Our Forces.

Three Quarters of a Mile Between City and Our Lines.

Troops Are Entrenching and Forces Will Be Augmented.

Lawton's Division and Baker's Brigade Carried El Caney Friday Evening.

American Losses Placed at 100 Killed and 600 Wounded. Spaniards Lost 1,000 Killed and Wounded. Shafter Wants Hospital Ships.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Owing to the confidential reports of the losses in the American lines in Friday's engagement, it has been thought best by the war department officials to make public the text of Gen. Shafter's last dispatch, received Saturday morning at 4 o'clock. It is as follows:

SANTIAGO, via Playa del Este, July 1.—Adjutant General, Washington.—I fear I have under-estimated Saturday's casualties. A large and thoroughly equipped hospital ship should be sent here at once to care for the wounded. The chief surgeon says he has use for 40 more medical officers. The ship must bring a launch and boats for conveying the wounded.

(Signed) SHAFER.
Major General Commanding.

NEW YORK, July 2.—A dispatch to the Herald from the headquarters of the American army before Santiago, July 1, via Playa del Este, says:

Maj. Gen. Shafter Friday morning began with great vigor the attack on the outer defenses of Santiago.

From three directions the American forces advanced toward the doomed city.

While Gen. Lawton and Gen. Wheeler were attacking Caney, northwest of Santiago, Gen. Kent was advancing toward Aguadores. Gen. Garcia, with his Cuban troops, at the same time approached Caney from the southeast and the other divisions of the American army pressed toward Santiago from the east, our forces thus presenting a solid front from the coast to Gen. Linera's northern defenses.

Four members of the 21st regiment of regulars were killed in the fighting between Seria and Aguadores, while 16 other Americans, all members of the 21st, were wounded.

Both the American and Spanish fleets eagerly joined in the battle. While Adm. Sampson's men were reducing the recently emplaced batteries at Aguadores, Adm. Cervera's fleet was hurling shells in the direction of the American and Cuban lines.

Two batteries of light artillery, acting under orders from Maj. Gen. Shafter, who went to the front at the head of the troops began the battle of Santiago by attacking Caney.

From this village a direct road leads into Santiago and the advance of our forces will be irresistible when they gain possession of this road.

Gen. Joe Wheeler, with a detachment of his cavalry command, and Gén. Garcia, with his Cuban troops, quickly joined Gen. Lawton's men in the advance upon Caney.

The Spaniards for a time fought desperately to prevent Caney from falling into the hands of our forces. It was a vain effort. Before the fighting had been long under way the Americans and Cubans gained ground. Foot by foot the enemy was driven back into the village.

It was evident after the first hour's fighting that Gen. Shafter had accurately gauged the strength of the enemy and that he would be able to drive the Spaniards into Santiago at his pleasure.

It was with difficulty that the commanding officers restrained the ardor of our troops until the hour for beginning the attack. The enthusiasm of the American forces was intense and their spirit quickly spread to the Cuban troops. All have shared the belief of Gen. Shafter that Santiago could be taken by a sharp, persistent attack and they have been impatient to advance.

Brig. Gen. Kent, who commands the center of the general line of attack, started the 21st regiment of the regulars toward Aguadores at the same hour Gen. Lawton's men advanced toward Caney. Upon these troops fell the brunt of the battle to the southeast of Santiago during the early hours of the day. There was desperate fighting about Aguadores. Acting under orders from Gen. Linera, the Spaniards at that point returned the American fire with a fury that aroused our men to the fiercest determination.

They boldly faced the enemy's fire, holding the ground tenaciously and pressing forward whenever an opportunity to gain an advanced footing presented itself.

In their operations about Aguadores the Americans were greatly encouraged by the work of the fleet, which poured a heavy fire into the lines of the Spaniards.

Shells supposedly from the Spanish fleet, did heavy execution among our troops.

During a lull in the fighting, an impressive incident occurred. The 21st infantry was out in front and suffering loss from the Spanish fire, but the men sang "The Star Spangled Banner" over the wounded joining in the singing.

NEW YORK, July 2.—A special dispatch to the Evening World, dated El Paso, Cuba, near Santiago, noon, by way of Playa del Este, July 1, says:

"The first artillery fight of the campaign has just been ended by the silencing of a Spanish battery.

The wounded are still being picked up as this dispatch is hurried away.

Gen. Lawton's division bivouacked near El Caney Thursday night with out fires.

At 5 o'clock there was a sullen "boom." It was the first shot from Cervera's battery, fired to avenge the killing of his son. Promptly the Spanish began to answer the challenge from their forts and trenches. At 7:15 Grimes battery opened on the Spanish troops to the right of the San Juan blockhouse.

The common powder used by our troops smoked and was a fine target for the Spanish field battery, which probably was served by Adm. Cervera's marines, judging by the accuracy of the aim. While our smoke gave the enemy our range, Grimes could not locate the enemy's guns, which used smokeless powder, except approximately, but, satisfied as was the Spanish position, our men worked like mad.

The Spanish fire gradually slackened and in less than an hour it ceased altogether.

Battery A, of the 2d artillery, deserves great credit for the victory for it was a case of blindness against sight. The battery lost, the officers were, as follows: Killed—Privates Underwood and Helm. Wounded—First Sergeant, George C. Henry; Sergeants West and Cornford; Corp. Keen.

The battery was supported by the rough riders, about 100 Cubans with a Hotchkiss gun, a detachment of the 10th cavalry and a squadron from Company C, of the 2d cavalry. Most of the Spanish shells flew low over the crest of the battery's position and exploded. Through them the rough riders had about ten wounded, among them E. Champlain, whose left elbow was smashed.

The Cuban leader Gonzales reports that the Cubans lost 20 killed and wounded.

The details of Gen. Lawton's losses have not arrived.

Heavy voluntary firing has been heard for three hours. It seems to indicate a strong American advance.

There is no artillery firing from El Caney, and only scattering shots come from San Juan, which has a slope of 15 feet in the hundred.

Both divisions really are in battle. The day is clear and a moderate breeze is blowing, but there is a strong heat. The troops are in good condition.

The military balloons used by the signal corps for the purpose of obtaining accurate information of the location of the enemy and the character of their defenses, proved of inestimable value in the engagement.

The insurgents fear that Gen. Aguinaldo will shoot Artachio and Sandino for having revealed the fact that the steamer Pasco, recently seized by the Hong Kong authorities, was laden with arms for the insurgents. Sandino applied to Consul Williams and was liberated. He is now on board the Naushan. It is feared that the incident will cause a split in the insurgent party, Sandino being influential and the only insurgent leader capable of administration.

The insurgents fear that Gen. Aguinaldo will shoot Artachio unless Adm. Dewey interferes, as he is suspicious that Sandino and he intended to form an opposition party.
